

Five Eggs, Six Moves

Three daily habits in one sheet: what to eat across two meals, the six home exercises, and 45 minutes of Japanese. Body and career, same page.

EGGS	MEAT	CHANA	MEALS	PROTEIN	OIL
5 a day	330 g raw	2 cups	2 a day	150 g	1 tbsp/meal

01 Your daily amounts

PALM SIZE

Meat

180 g + 150 g

76 g protein

180g at lunch, 150g at dinner.

That is roughly one large chicken breast plus a little — about 330g raw a day. Each portion is your palm, 2cm thick.

5 EGGS

Eggs

5 a day

31 g protein

3 with lunch, 2 with dinner. Boil ten on Sunday and keep them in the fridge — then you never have to think about it.

CUPPED HANDS

Chana

1 cup × 2

30 g protein

Soak 110g dry overnight → cooks to about 2 cups. One full cup at each meal. Cook a big batch on Sunday.

FIST SIZE

Rice

½ cup

per meal

Half a cup cooked $\approx$ half your fist. Measured, every meal. See section 03.

Why these numbers: you need 150g of protein a day to keep your muscle while losing fat. Without protein powder, that means eggs, meat, chana and dal every day — there is no way around the amounts above.

02 Your day, meal by meal

WHEN	EAT THIS	PROTEIN
12:00 Lunch	180g chicken (palm + a bit) 1 cup chana 3 eggs ½ cup rice + big vegetables	75 g
17:00 Optional	1 banana, if you feel empty before training Not a meal — just fuel	1 g
19:30 Dinner	150g chicken or fish 1 cup chana in the tarkari 2 eggs 2 bowls dal + saag ½ cup rice	80 g
Total	Target reached in two plates	155 g

Eat in this order at every meal: vegetables first → protein second → rice last. Same food, same calories, but the blood sugar spike is much smaller. Worth doing every single time.

Two meals a day is fine. Eating between 12pm and 8pm is a normal 16:8 pattern, and it has no downside for fat loss — it often helps, because it is harder to overeat in an eight-hour window. The only thing that matters is that the protein and the calories land inside it.

The real difficulty is volume. 75g of protein in one sitting is a big plate — you have to eat a lot of chicken, chana, eggs and dal at once. Weigh it for the first two weeks or you will fall short without noticing, and end up losing muscle instead of fat.

03 The rice cup

Buy a 計量カップ (measuring cup) at Daiso — about ¥110. Get the one marked to 200ml with lines down the side.

Uncooked rice, per meal	90 ml
That cooks into	~165 g
Which is	~250 kcal
Twice a day = total	~500 kcal

Buy at Daiso (¥110 each):

- ① 計量カップ — measuring cup, 200ml
- ② 計量スプーン — measuring spoons, for the 1 tablespoon of oil
- ③ ご飯茶碗 — a small rice bowl. Use the same one every meal and never fill it more than half

Even better if you can spend ¥1,000: a kitchen scale (キッチンスケール). Weigh your chicken for two weeks and you will never guess a portion wrong again.

No cup? Use your fist. One cup of cooked rice is about the size of your closed fist. Half a cup is half that. Not perfect, but far better than filling the bowl.

The six exercises

01 • LEGS

Bulgarian split squat

3 × 10-15 each leg

SET UP

- 1 Put a chair against a wall so it cannot slide behind you,
- 2 Stand 60cm in front of it, facing away about
- 3 Lift right foot and rest the top of that your backwards foot on the chair seat
- 4 Left foot flat on the floor in front. Far enough forward that your knee stays above your ankle when you bend

THE MOVEMENT

- 1 Bend your left knee and drop straight down, like a lift — do not lean forward
- 2 Go down until your right knee is near the floor
- 3 Push through your left heel to stand back up
- 4 Finish all reps on the left, then swap legs

02 • CHEST

Slow push-up

3 × near failure • 3 sec down

SET UP

- 1 Hands on the floor, slightly wider than your shoulders
- 2 Legs straight out behind, toes on the floor
- 3 Squeeze your glutes so your body is one straight line from head to heels

THE MOVEMENT

- 1 Bend your elbows and lower your chest over 3 slow seconds
- 2 Elbows backwards at 45°, not straight out to the sides
- 3 Stop when your chest is a fist's height above the floor
- 4 Push back up at normal speed

Too hard? Hands on the chair seat. Too easy? Feet on the chair.

03 • BACK

Inverted row

3 × as many as possible

SET UP

- 1 Test the table first — pull hard on the edge with your full weight. A light table will tip over
- 2 Lie on your back, face up, underneath the table
- 3 Slide up so chest is under the table edge your
- 4 Grip the edge with slightly wider than both hands, your shoulders
- 5 Legs straight out, heels on the floor

THE MOVEMENT

- 1 Keep your one — it is an upside-body in straight line down push-up
- 2 Pull your chest up until it touches the table edge
- 3 Lower slowly until your arms are straight again

Do not skip this. It is the only pulling exercise, and without it push-ups will round your shoulders forward.

- 2 Stop knees, hips and shoulders form one straight line when
- 3 Squeeze your backside hard for 2 seconds

Two good channels to look for: Jeff Nippard and Jeremy Ethier — both explain the form carefully and slowly, and both are free. Watch one video per exercise. That is 15 minutes total, and it will save you months of doing them slightly wrong.

Film yourself once.

Prop your phone against a wall and record one set from the side. Compare it to the video you watched. This is how you actually find out what you are doing wrong — you will not feel it, but you will see it immediately.

06 The week

Monday	Six exercises — 40 min
Tuesday	Stairs — 10 rounds, 4 floors
Wednesday	Six exercises — 40 min
Thursday	Stairs — 10 rounds
Friday	Six exercises — 40 min
Saturday	Rest
Sunday	Rest, or easy stairs

Stairs: walk up, walk down. Never run down — that is where knees and ankles get hurt. Wait 45 minutes after dinner before doing them.

Your day, hour by hour

12:00	Lunch — 180g chicken, 1 cup chana, 3 eggs, ½ cup rice, vegetables
17:00	A banana, only if you feel too empty to train well
18:00	Home → water → change clothes. Do not sit down
18:10	Train — six exercises, or stairs
19:30	Dinner — 150g chicken or fish, 1 cup chana, 2 eggs, dal, saag, ½ cup rice
20:15	Walk 15 minutes, or easy stairs
22:30	Phone down
23:00	Sleep

Training before dinner is the right order. You train on a light stomach, then eat your biggest protein meal straight afterwards — that is when your muscles use it best. Do not train after dinner: a full plate of dal, rice and chicken will make you feel sick.

If you feel weak at 6pm, that is the six-hour gap since lunch, not a problem with the plan. One banana at 5pm fixes it and costs about 100 calories. It is worth it — a good training session matters more than a perfectly clean eating window.

Six rules

- 1

Write down every set.

Next session, beat one number — one more rep, or a few more seconds. Without this, nothing improves after month two.

Measure the oil with a spoon.

One tablespoon per meal. Never pour from the bottle.
- 3

Measure the rice with the cup.

90ml uncooked per meal. Every meal.

Hit 150g protein every day.

5 eggs, 330g meat, 2 cups chana, plus dal — split across your two meals. Miss this and you lose muscle, not fat.
- 5

Vegetables first, protein second, rice last.

Every meal.

Sleep 7–8 hours.

This is when muscle is rebuilt. Short sleep turns fat loss into muscle loss.

08

Japanese — the other daily habit

Speaking is a separate skill from studying. Most people study for years and still cannot talk, because they never practise output. You get good at what you actually do — so speak every day, even alone.

45 minutes a day

TIME	WHAT	WHEN
15 min	Shadowing — the highest-value exercise	Morning
15 min	Vocabulary — Anki or WaniKani	Commute
15 min	Listening — podcast or video	During your stairs session
10 min	Talk out loud to yourself — narrate what you are doing	While cooking
2–3× week	Real conversation with a person — not optional	Evening

Stack it onto what you already do. Listen during stairs. Talk to yourself while cooking. Vocabulary on the train. Only the shadowing needs its own 15 minutes.

How to shadow

FIVE STEPS

- 1 Find short audio with a transcript — one or two minutes is plenty
- 2 Listen once while reading the transcript
- 3 Play it again and speak along at the same time — match the speed, rhythm and intonation exactly
- 4 Repeat the same clip 10–20 times over several days, until it comes out automatically
- 5 Only then move to a new clip

This trains your mouth, not your brain. Fifteen minutes of shadowing changes your speaking more than an hour of textbook study. It is the one technique nearly everyone skips.

Where to practise

SOURCE	BEST FOR
NHK News Web Easy	The best shadowing source. Audio + full transcript + furigana, free, new every day
Nihongo con Teppei	Short natural episodes, ideal length for shadowing
Comprehensible Japanese	Graded, clear speech — best if you are still early
Onomappu	Natural Japanese with Japanese subtitles
Dogen	Pitch accent — what makes you sound natural rather than foreign
"Shadowing: Let us Speak Japanese"	The dedicated textbook series, with audio. Amazon.co.jp

Talking to real people

italki	Paid tutors, ¥1,500–3,000/hour. Most effective — a tutor corrects you, a friend will not
HelloTalk / Tandem	Free language exchange apps
Your colleagues	Ask them to speak Japanese with you. Free, and daily
Oita international centre	Free or cheap conversation groups
Beppu / APU area	Large international student community nearby

The real barrier is not grammar — it is fear of sounding stupid. This is why people study for five years and still cannot speak. Someone who speaks badly every day improves far faster than someone who studies perfectly and stays silent. Accept looking foolish for six months and you will be fluent.

Record yourself for one minute every week. Talk about your day, then listen back. Uncomfortable —
